

"Why are you laughing? I said 'swirling pools of gas clouds made our planet.' "

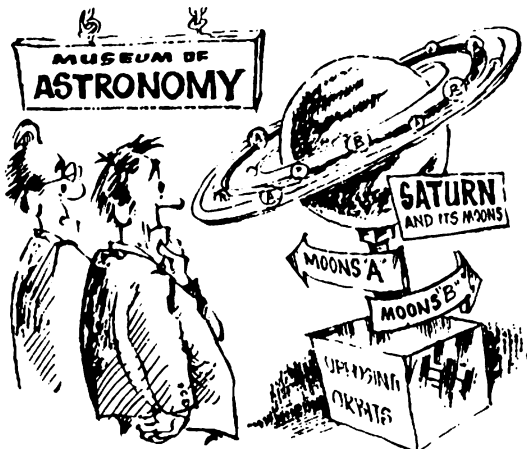

"Grumble, grumble, grumble. Our theory would have been better off if we had never gone to the moon."

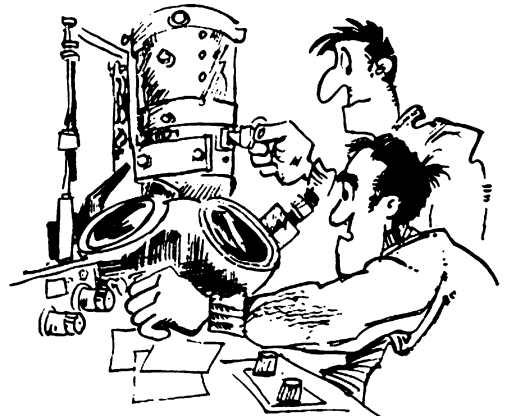

"We're looking for a new planet in our solar system. Floating hydrogen between us and Pluto ought to begin making one any day now."

"Isn't there some way we can slow the planets down, so we can make them agree with the theory."
 "Prof, I have an idea: All we need do is speed up the sun!"

"Isn't there some way we can rearrange the solar system, so it will agree with the theory?"

"If we could just invent something to glue gas together, the theory would have it made."