

"The 'family tree' of species ancestry is the great proof of evolution. We know it is so because the theory says so."

"Why didn't they ask us for our opinion? All the evidence about us points to creation, not evolution."

"Because of genetic depletion, we are less competent in every way than monkeys, and they, in turn, are less capable—in both bodies and brains—than the creatures they descended from. Somehow, we've got to make that fact fit the theory."

"Come on, now, won't you please hatch into a different species! If you will, I'll get a Nobel Prize out of this."

"I just can't figure out how classifying an animal is any kind of proof that it evolved from something else."

"Begone! all of you! Evolutionary theory cannot explain distinct species!"
